The Sharp Time Mary Oconnell

It's also colorful and firmly literary realism, a nod to author Mary O'Connell's MFA from the Iowa Writer's Workshop. Full of lively characters and vivid settings, THE SHARP TIME feels a bit like magic realism, as The Pale Circus could be a setting for saints or sprites as much as it is the setting for its realistic-but-larger-than-life Henry Charbonneau, Bradley and Erika.

Mary O'Connell has given us a bright, energetic heroine who manages to keep a sense of humor despite suffering some very hard knocks. The book opens up discussions of a lot of big issues—teacher-student bullying, Catholic sex abuse, gun control, grief, revenge, vandalism, theft—and doesn't offer any pat answers, making The Sharp Time a good pick for reading groups.
